Annexation To Be Effective January 1

On Friday, December 7th, Appomattox County succeeded in its attempt to have the Town of Appomattox annex county land containing the new Thomasville Furniture Industries, Inc. property and the new high school area.

With the annexation, the County of Appomattox will be relieved of its responsibility of sharing in the cost of water and sewer to the Thomasville property and of the cost of construction of road access to the property.

By annexing the Thomasville plant site and the site of the new Appomattox Senior High School, both now under construction, and incidental parcels between those properties and the existing County Limits it will be more desirable and expedient for the Town of Appomattox because it will make the boundaries more compact and easier to provide water service, sewer service, garbage collection and zoning in addition to the fact that the town has a way of constructing an access road through the Virginia Department of Highways at no cost to the Town of Appomattox.

All residences involved will now be entitled to garbage collection, town police protection, in-town rate on water and elimination of sewer service charges.

All parties involved in the annexation suit had requested that they be annexed.

There was no opposition to the suit and following a forty-five minute hearing George F. Abbitt, Circuit Court Judge, said he would sign the order this week making the annexation effective on January 1, 1974.
